2023-24 USHL MEDIA GUIDE

AMERICA'S ONLY TIER 1 JUNIOR HOCKEY LEAGUE |

2023-24 USHL MEDIA GUIDE

From the President & Commissioner: Glenn Hefferan

On behalf of the USHL Board of Governors, I would like to welcome you to the League's 45th Anniversary Season as 16 teams take the ice in pursuit of the Clark Cup. Last season was one for the record books as the Fargo Force claimed their first Anderson Cup as the USHL regular-season champions and the Youngstown Phantoms claimed the Clark Cup as post-season champions for the first time. One thing we all know is that the USHL is more than just a league. It represents the future of professional and collegiate hockey in America. We take immense pride in working toward fulfilling our vision for our players, coaches, officials, and fans. We're committed to fostering a culture of excellence on and off the ice and together, with our dedicated team owners and League partners, it's our goal to continue to elevate the league to new heights and inspire the next generation of NHL and college hockey champions. With 51 current or former players selected at the 2023 National Hockey League Draft, the USHL has continued its path as the top producer of elite hockey talent in the world. And with a total of 644 former USHL players suiting up for NCAA Division I teams in 2022-23 (nearly 40% of all players coming via the USHL), the League is the most successful supplier of talent to the college game. The USHL and our member clubs look forward to bringing you a fun, family-friendly season of hockey action and all-around entertainment. Thank you for your continued support and best wishes in the 2023-2024 season.
Sincerely,

Glenn Hefferan
USHL President and Commissioner

USHL game between the Waterloo Black Hawks and Rochester Mustangs.

The Lineage Leagues

By Roger Godin:
(Written for the 2017-18 USHL Media Guide)

The United States Hockey League's history reaches back to the 1947-48 season with the formation of the American Amateur Hockey Association (AAHA) on June 10, 1947. This league, and those that would follow would participate in what was then described at various times as either Senior, Senior A, or Senior Open by the Amateur Hockey Association of the United States, now USA Hockey. Play would be characterized by organized schedules culminating in a league champion or, in some years, a playoff champion. It was competitive hockey not to be confused with what is now described as Adult hockey. Membership throughout the period included teams on occasion representing current USHL member clubs Des Moines, Green Bay, and Sioux City.

During an era when the six team NHL included few American players, ie; three in 1947-48 in John Mariucci (Chicago), Frank Brimsek (Boston), and Bill Moe (NY Rangers), the lineage leagues provided some of the best competition available for players from the United States. Mariucci, along with Earl Bartholome (AHL), and Virgil Johnson (NHL-AHL) were among early American pros who would finish their playing careers in the lineage leagues. The leagues provided one of the sources for United States Olympic/National teams of this era, 1947-1961.

The AAHA's founding members were the Minneapolis Jerseys, Minneapolis Bermans, St. Paul Tallys, St. Paul Koppy's, White Bear Lake Seven-Ups, and Rochester Mustangs. The initial season of play saw the Tally's and Seven-Ups participate in a total goals championship series at Rochester with the Seven-Ups winning ten goals to nine. The league continued under the AAHA banner through the 1951-52 season after which the name Central Hockey League (CHL) was adopted for 1952-53, followed by Minnesota Hockey League (MHL) for 1953-56, Central United States Hockey League (CUSHL) 1956-57, and back to Central Hockey League through the 1961 season. After that, the United States Hockey League designation is in place through the transition to the junior level of play up to the present time.

The Rochester Mustangs were a consistent competitive factor during the lineage years, winning league championships in 1950, 1955, 1956, 1957, 1958, 1959, and 1961. No other city would win more than two in this era, St. Paul in 1949 and 1952, and Hibbing with back to back titles in 1953 and 1954. The Mustangs were truly the dominant team of the lineage era.

American-developed players who recorded noteworthy seasons in this timeframe included Bill Galligan, St. Paul, with scoring titles in 1948-49 and 1950-51, and Arley Carlson, Rochester, with scoring titles in 1949-50 and 1957-58. St. Paul's Arnie Bauer, 1952-53, and Don Brossoit, Thief River Falls, 1958-59, are two other scoring leaders. Carlson was a native of Virginia, Minn., while the others were from their respective communities. In the nets, Eveleth natives Bill Nemgar, 1949-50, 1950-51, and Tom Yurkovich, 1957-58 recorded league best GAA's for the Rochester Mustangs. Minneapolis native Jim Mattson was the top netminder in 1959-60 with Green Bay while Rochester native Jerry Nickols was tops with his hometown Mustangs in 1960-61.

Ken Johannson won the league scoring title while with Rochester in 1959-60 while Bill Reichert did the same in 1960-61. Both were Canadian-developed players who became naturalized citizens and would later represent the United States internationally, just like Galligan, Bauer, and Yurkovich.

The Merger

Prior to the 1961-62 season, the CUSHL decided to adopt a name that hadn't been used in the United States since 1951: United States Hockey League. From 1945-51, the USHL had served as a professional league in America to supply NHL clubs with future waves of talent, or in some cases, allow aging veterans to play out their remaining career at a lower level of hockey. The Boston Bruins, Chicago Blackhawks, Detroit Red Wings, New York Rangers and Toronto Maple Leafs had turned to the Kansas City Pla-Mors, Omaha Knights, Tulsa Oilers, St. Paul Saints, Fort Worth Rangers, Dallas Texans and Minneapolis Millers for players to fill their NHL rosters. Players such as Murray Armstrong, Joffre Desilets, Virgil Johnson, George Johnston, Don Morrison and Gus Mortson had all been able to parlay their USHL experience into playing for an NHL team. Even a 17-year old Gordie Howe played in the USHL for the Omaha Knights prior to donning Detroit's famed winged wheel. Following the 1950-51 season, the USHL had folded leaving way to the linear leagues earlier discussed. The "new" USHL, beginning in 1961-62, consisted of five teams playing a 25-game schedule.

The Rochester Mustangs and Green Bay Bobcats dominated the season with 19-6-0 and 17-8-0 records, respectively, while the Milwaukee Metros struggled on and off the ice. After going 2-7-0 in the team's first nine games, the Metros ceased operations and the league was condensed to four teams. John Mayasich, a former two-time U.S. Olympian, not only led the Green Bay Bobcats on the ice, but also behind the bench as the team's head coach. For the Minneapolis Rebels, head coach Walter Bush had made his return to the game after coaching the Minneapolis Culbertsons in the USCHL during the 1957-58 season.

The Waterloo Black Hawks would make their USHL debut during the 1962-63 season, led by defenseman and head coach Leonard "Oakie" Brumm. The Marquette, Mich., native had accepted the job just one season after playing for the Des Moines Oak Leafs. Brumm would go on to enjoy an eight-year coaching career in the USHL while also playing in six of them. Mayasich and the Bobcats would prove to be too much to handle for the rest of the league, as they went on to a successful 25-7-0 season.

The league struggled to keep its five member clubs afloat over the next five years, but it would receive a boost at the box office prior to the 1966-67 season. Needing better competition to help train for the 1968 Winter Olympics, the U.S. National Team played a 24-game schedule in the USHL with Murray Williamson as the team's head coach. Williamson would later be a large influence in the creation, or merger, of the USHL with the Minnesota Junior Hockey League (MJHL) into the all-junior league we are familiar with today.

The national team would finish the season at 13-9-2 with a roster that included players such as Bill Masterton, Herb Brooks, Doug Woog and John Cunniff. Masterton joined the national team after playing two seasons with the USHL St. Paul Steers. The following season he was signed by the Minnesota North Stars in the NHL, where he scored the expansion franchise's first goal.

Following the boost provided by the National/Olympic Team, the USHL expanded to six teams for the 1968-69 season: Marquette Iron Rangers, Green Bay Bobcats, Waterloo Black Hawks, Rochester Mustangs, Sault Sainte Marie Canadians and Duluth Port Stars. However, a slow start for Duluth led to the club folding, and the Grand Rapids Bruins assumed the remaining schedule and players on New Year's Eve in 1968. The league quickly condensed back to a four-team schedule for the 1969-70 season, with only Marquette, Green Bay, Sault Saint Marie and Rochester surviving.

The league would remain four teams until the 1972-73 season when a Northern and Southern division displayed signs for the growth of hockey. The Thunder Bay Twins beat out the Marquette Iron Rangers and Sault Saint Marie Greyhounds in the North, while the Chicago Warriors topped the Green Bay Bobcats, Waterloo Black Hawks and Sioux City Musketeers in the South.

USHL LEAGUE HISTORY

A series of expansion failures throughout Michigan and Wisconsin left the USHL in jeopardy of financial ruin due to player costs, operations bills and travel fees. However, a league of junior hockey teams in Minnesota had been gaining momentum and notoriety for its ability to develop top college athletes prior to their time in the NCAA.

After taking the silver medal in the 1972 Winter Olympics in Japan, Williamson and Hal Trumble turned over the national coaching responsibilities to Brooks. With 12 of the 20 players coming from the state of Minnesota, Williamson and Trumble began work on the MJHL to better help develop international ice hockey talent, prior to those players attending college, accomplished the goal of creating better pro and Division I talent. The St. Paul Vulcans captured the first-ever Don Clark Cup, a trophy that is still awarded to the USHL playoff champions today. Woog returned back to the MJHL as the head coach of the Vulcans after his USHL playing time, and was able to capture the MJHL title and Anderson Cup in 1977-78. The MJHL went on to produce 20 NHL Draft picks during its four-season operation. However, much like the senior USHL, the MJHL began to face uncertainty due to financial concerns surrounding its operations.

Prior to the 1976-77 season, the MJHL had reached out to the USHL in the interest of helping both leagues, who were facing similar financial complications at the time, and proposed a three-year merger in which two conferences would exist: professional and amateur. Naturally, the professional Waterloo Black Hawks, Sioux City Musketeers and Green Bay Bobcats dominated their schedule against the Austin Mavericks, Bloomington Junior Stars and St. Paul Vulcans over the course of two seasons.

1979 was an important year, not just for the USHL, but for hockey in the United States. Not only had the merger between the senior USHL and amateur MJHL been accomplished one season earlier than expected, but floods of highly-touted college athletes were now coming from regions outside of the east coast. Efforts from Bush, now president of the Minnesota North Stars, had financially supported much of this growth, and gave birth to the junior league many know today as the only Tier 1 junior hockey league in America. The Hennepin Nordiques, formally of the MJHL, had won both the USHL's Anderson Cup as regular season champions and Clark Cup as playoff champions during its inaugural season. But that wasn't the most celebrated accomplishment in the United States as the United States National Team took the world by storm in 1980 with the Miracle on Ice, and their eventual gold medal finish.

Following the 1979-80 inaugural season, the USHL would play with no less than seven teams ever again. By 1986-87, the USHL reached a stable level of 10 member clubs, and would maintain its level of membership over the next eight years. The league would gain attention from both NHL and WHA scouts, making frequents stops throughout the Midwest in rinks searching for the next big hockey talent. Brooks once again resurfaced early in the league's existence, as he began using its amateur status to help his recruits develop before coming to play for him at the University of Minnesota. roster. The next decade of stability within the USHL, both on the ice and in the front office, slowly built the league into the dominant force in American junior hockey.

The St. Paul Vulcans quickly became known as the "Gophers Hockey farm team", or "junior varsity squad" due to his influence on the roster. The next decade of stability within the USHL, both on the ice and in the front office, slowly built the league into the dominant force in American junior hockey.

St. Paul Vulcans

Jim Johannson served in the St. Paul Vulcans organization as General Manager (1995-00), and as Head Coach (1995-98). Johannson passed away in 2018, and was inducted into the U.S. Hockey Hall of Fame in 2022.

The Tier 1 Era

2002-03 will forever be a benchmark season for the USHL and its place in American junior hockey. After successful seasons throughout the 1980s and 1990s, coupled with increasing investment from ownership in arenas, player facilities and front office standards, the USHL was able to solidify itself within USA Hockey as America's only Tier 1 junior hockey league.

Although the 2002-03 season is the official benchmark of the USHL being named the only Tier 1 junior hockey league in the United States, much of the work and infrastructure that was done to make it possible came in earlier seasons. Some of the league's earliest coaches, including Jack Barzee, Bob Ferguson, Kevin Hartzell, Scott Owens, Frank Serratore and Dave Siciliano had begun paving the way for a decade of successful coaches in the 1990s. Cary Eades appeared in the Clark Cup Final in 1992 and 1993; Mike Guentzel won back-to-back Clark Cup championships with the Omaha Lancers in 1993 and 1994; Don Granato won his first Clark Cup championship with Green Bay in 1996, and took his team to the 1997 Clark Cup Final. However, it wasn't just a new group of coaches who etched their name in the Clark Cup. Ferguson won twice with Des Moines, in 1992 and 1995, while Owens claimed the 1999 Clark Cup championship with the Buccaneers.

The group of veteran and young coaches who guided USHL teams in the 1990s led to an era in which USHL coaches began to receive NCAA Division I coaching opportunities, mixed with some professional hockey opportunities as well. Players were now traveling to the Midwestern United States to play under some of the best coaches in the country. A record-high 10 players were selected at the NHL Draft from the USHL following the 1990-91 season, only to be broken twice over the next decade: 13 selections in 1997, and 17 in 2000.

Players from the first five seasons of USHL play, including Rick Zombo, Phil Housley and Gary Suter became household NHL names in the late 1980s and early 1990s. NHL teams went back to the league in an attempt to replicate earlier success, with players such as Shjon Podein, Derek Plante, John Gruden and Landon Wilson, all being selected in both early and late rounds of the NHL Draft.

USHL rinks began to upgrade and legitimize their hockey operations to match the success of its coaches and players as well. Whether a player was selected directly from the USHL, or as an alumnus while attending college, more and more American junior league talent was being selected in the first 50 picks of the NHL Draft, signifying the trust from NHL clubs in the league's ability to develop world-class athletes. Recruitment efforts by the league and its member clubs ramped up even more with the proliferation of its development efforts coupled with the fact that players did not have to pay for their equipment or ice time while in the league.

2002-03 was the first official season the USHL played with its USA Hockey Tier 1 status, and the Lincoln Stars won both the Anderson Cup and Clark Cup as regular season and playoff champions. The Stars beat out the Eastern Conference's Waterloo Black Hawks by two points in the regular season, led by forwards Ryan Potulny and David Backes. Goaltender Jean-Philippe Lamoureux was also a steady presence in net, finishing second among USHL goaltenders that season. By the end of the season, the USHL would go on to produce 31 NHL Draft prospects such as fifth overall selection Thomas Vanek. NTDP players Mark Stuart, Ryan Kesler and Patrick Eaves would join Vanek later in the first round. The second round would be just as productive for the USHL creating future NHL talent with the likes of Backes, Matt Carle and Jimmy

USHL LEAGUE HISTORY

Howard. Backes' teammate Potulny was selected by the Philadelphia Flyers in the third round, and future NHL players Corey Potter, Drew Miller, Joe Pavelski and Chris Porter all were selected in rounds four through nine. In total, 12 players were selected from the USHL in the first 100 picks, signifying a close tie to the NHL and its clubs that would soon come to the forefront of the hockey world.

Over the next two decades the USHL continued to produce NCAA and NHL players, coaches and front office staff. Players like Paul Stastny, Justin Abdelkader, Trevor Lewis, Kyle Okposo, Alec Martinez, Max Pacioretty, John Carlson and many others began their professional hockey journey in cities throughout Iowa, Nebraska, Indiana and Michigan.

Just prior to the USHL's Tier 1 designation, the Cedar Rapids RoughRiders and Sioux Falls Stampede organizations joined the league before the start of the 1999-00 season. However, a series of economic situations would plague some USHL markets. The Thunder Bay Flyers ceased operations in 2000, while the Fargo-Moorhead Ice Sharks and Twin Cities Vulcans became the Chicago Steel and Tri-City Storm, respectively. The Tulsa Crude, formally known as the Dubuque Fighting Saints, and Rochester Mustangs ceased operations in 2002, while the historic Omaha Lancers organization relocated to Council Bluffs, Iowa and became the River City Lancers.

In 2008, the Ohio Junior Blue Jackets would become the Fargo Force, marking a turn toward stability within the league throughout its footprint. Along with the Force, the Youngstown Phantoms, Dubuque Fighting Saints, Muskegon Lumberjacks, Bloomington Thunder and Madison Capitols were all added to the league over the course of the next six years. NTDP was also added as a full-time member to the USHL in 2009.

The hockey world at large began to look to the USHL as a development league for future NHL talent when the league produced back-to-back seasons of 37 players selected directly from the USHL in 2014 and 2015. Including alumni, the league produced 51 and 48 total selections, respectively. At the same time, USHL alumni began to make headlines at higher levels of hockey. Over a four-year period the Chicago Blackhawks and Los Angeles Kings alternated as Stanley Cup champions featuring USHL alumni Lewis, Martinez, Brandon Saad and Patrick Sharp, among others. On the international stage, the 2014 U.S. Olympic team featured 10 USHL alumni playing for their country. One year after Team USA captured gold with 16 USHL alumni at the World Junior Championship, 19 USHL alumni were named to the 2014 roster. Jon Cooper took the Tampa Bay Lightning to the 2015 Stanley Cup Final just five seasons after winning a Clark Cup with the Green Bay Gamblers, and the summer of 2015 also saw two additional USHL coaches named head coaches of NHL teams: Jeff Blashill of the Detroit Red Wings and Dave Hakstol of the Philadelphia Flyers. Johnny Gaudreau, originally a fourth round NHL Draft pick, had just completed an impressive 64-point rookie season with the Calgary Flames in 2014-15, just one season after winning the prestigious Hobey Baker Award, college hockey's highest individual honor. USHL alum Jack Eichel won the Hobey Baker Award as the USHL's fifth consecutive winner the following year, and entered the 2015 NHL Draft as a potential first or second overall pick. Jaden Schwartz followed up a 56-point 2013-14 season with a 63-point 2014-15 campaign. Justin Faulk had just completed his second consecutive full-time NHL season in 2014-15, finishing second in team scoring with 49 points as a defenseman. Zemgus Girgensons just completed his second full NHL season in 2014-15 after signing a pro contract straight from the USHL with the Buffalo Sabres. Erik Cole retired in 2014-15 after a 13-year NHL career that included more than 870 games, a Stanley Cup championship and an Olympics appearance. The league featured no shortage of headlines, as it continued its efforts to recruit and promote the best junior hockey talent playing in America.

Riding the wave of momentum alongside college hockey, the USHL boasted a high-end first round at the 2015 NHL Draft. Eichel, Noah Hanifin and Zach Werenski were all USHL alumni that were selected from NCAA Division I programs, joining the likes of Ivan Provorov, Kyle Connor, Colin White, Brock Boeser and Jack Roslovic in the first 30 selections. All but one of the aforementioned players had elected to play college hockey following their USHL career. The following year marked even more high-end markers set by the league at the NHL Draft. Auston Matthews became the first USHL alum to be selected first overall since Rick DiPietro in 2000. Clayton Keller was also the second-highest draft pick selected directly from the USHL since Phil Housley was selected sixth overall in 1982. Keller was selected seventh overall by the Arizona Coyotes, matching Okposo's seventh overall seletion in 2006. In total, 10 USHL players were selected in the first round of the 2016 NHL Draft, a record that still stands today.

USHL LEAGUE HISTORY

2017 saw similar NHL Draft success, with first round talents Casey Mittelstadt, Josh Norris, Ryan Poehling, Jake Oettinger, Shane Bowers and Eeli Tolvanen going on day one in Chicago, Ill. The development success didn't end there, as Chicago Steel head coach Dan Muse was named assistant coach of the Nashville Predators, becoming the first USHL coach to be promoted directly to an NHL bench. Later that summer, Green Bay Gamblers video coach Jeff Weintraub joined the Detroit Red Wings as an assistant video coach. In total, 13 USHL coaches advanced to professional or Division I coaching opportunities following the 2016-17 season.

The future of the USHL will depend on much of the same level of talent that vaulted the league to its Tier 1 success. In order to attract some of the best junior talent in the world, the league will continue to strive to attract the best coaches, build the best facilities and employ the highest quality front offices with both some of the most talented long-standing employees alongside some of the industry's best up-and-coming staff. Fans can expect to enjoy the best in-game entertainment throughout the Midwest, while watching the future of American NCAA Division 1 and NHL talent.

USHL AWARDS

The Curt Hammer Award has been presented annually since the 1988-89 season in honor of the late Curt Hammer, and recognizes the USHL player who distinguishes himself both on and off the ice by demonstrating outstanding performance, skills, pride, and determination. Curt Hammer served as President of the Des Moines Buccaneers for three seasons (1984-87) and also held the role of Secretary for the USHL. Hammer, a dedicated volunteer and supporter of hockey in the Des Moines community until succumbing to cancer in 1987, was one of the founders of Hart-Hammer, Inc., a commercial heating and air conditioning ventilation equipment sales firm. The company still operates today, providing extensive sales and engineering support in Iowa, Nebraska, and western Illinois. The award was established to honor his commitment to the League and the perseverance he displayed in continuing his work through hockey while battling his illness.

Cole Knuble, was the 2023 recipient of the Curt Hammer Award. He was a member of the Fargo Force.

USHL Distinguished Service Award

Bob Ferguson

2008: Scott Brand worked more than 25 seasons in the USHL. Starting as an on-ice official in 1984, Brand would become one of the finest referees in the league's early years. He would serve as the USHL Referee-in-Chief on two occasions from 1990-94. In 1992, he left the ice to become the General Manager and President of the Waterloo Black Hawks. He would take the same role in Dubuque in 1996. Beginning in 1998, he served as the USHL's Director of Hockey Operations and was instrumental in the creation of the USA Hockey Junior Officials Development Program.

2008: Bob Ferguson Ferguson played in the USHL when it was a pro league and would go on to coach in the junior circuit for 18 seasons, compiling a 517-314-42 record. Behind the bench of Sioux City (1981-90) and Des Moines (1990-95, 2001-05), he coached more games (873) and set the benchmark for wins (517) that would stand for years to come. Ferguson was a driving force behind the creation of the USHL's preseason tournament, originally known as the Corn Bowl. The eventwas first held in Sioux City in the late 1980's before moving to Des Moines and becoming the Buc Bowl in 1990. Today, the USHL Fall Classic, as it is known, is one of the most heavily-scouted hockey events in North America.

2007: Ted Baer and his family purchased the Lancers in 1987 and almost immediately turned them into the premier Member Club in the USHL. He moved the team to venerable Ak-Sar-Ben Coliseum and almost instantly began to establish attendance records. Later, he purchased the Twin Cities Vulcans and moved them to Kearney, Neb., to become the Tri-City Storm, introducing hockey to central Nebraska. During his time of four Anderson Cups, ownership, his teams captured six Clark Cups and one national championship. He sold the Lancers in 2004 and did the same with the Storm two years later.

2007: Butch Johnson Perhaps no team owner has had a greater impact on the USHL than Johnson. Johnson entered the league in 1994 when he purchased the North Iowa Huskies.He would purchase the Waterloo Black Hawks in 1997, stabilizing the ownership of one of the league's charter teams. He moved the Huskies to Cedar Rapids in 2000 and expanded the league to Topeka, Kan. in 2001. Johnson made an indelible mark on junior hockey when he served as league President, leading the charge in the USHL's quest to become America's first Tier I junior league, a dream that became reality in 2002.

2006: John Cowley The USHL couldn't operate without the people who do the job behind the scenes, and almost from the beginning, John Cowley has been there. Cowley served for many years as the Official Statistician for the USHL. Today, Cowley is employed by USA Hockey, serving as its junior hockey registrar. Cowley has the task of monitoring the protected lists of all junior leagues, in all classifications, in the United States. In addition, he offers administrative support to various teams that represent the United States at international hockey events.

2006: Ken Williamson became involved in junior hockey in 1975 when he and a group of investors purchased the USHL's Bloomington Jr. Stars. He became the team's Head Coach and General Manager that first season. He would go on to serve the USHL in three different capacities, beginning in 1982. First, he was the league's Referee-in-Chief. Later he would become the League's Treasurer before eventually serving a term as League Commissioner. During his tenure, he would also enjoy the role as the General Manager of the USHL teams that annually traveled to Switzerland to take part in the Coupe Beard International Tournament. He would leave the USHL to become a scout in the NHL with the St. Louis Blues (1993-94) and the Ottawa Senators, who he began working for in 1999. Williamson was honored posthumously.

2005: Jack Barzee has played an integral role in the USHL for over 40 years. First as a player, then as a coach and an owner, Barzee was vital in the league's transition from professional to amateur. After a successful playing career, Barzee coached and later owned the Waterloo Black Hawks and then founded the Dubuque Fighting Saints. Later, Barzee would serve on the USA Hockey Board of Directors and today is employed by NHL Central Scouting.

2005: Ron Woodey is one of the pioneers of amateur hockey in the United States. As one of the founders of the USHL, Woodey was also a founding father of the St. Paul Vulcans. He was named USHL General Manager of the Year in 1983-84, the year he helped build a St. Paul team that won both the Anderson and Clark Cup. Woodey served as the USHL President from 1979-81 and was the League Treasurer from 1985-90. He was vital to the merger of the USHL and the Midwest Junior Hockey League in 1979 and his legacy lived on in the USHL as his name was attached to the award that was presented to the MVP of the USHL Prospects/All-Star Game, which was awarded beginning in 1990. Woodey was honored posthumously.

2004: Ed and Billie Hanes are the two people most would credit with reviving the North Iowa Huskies in the 1980's. Jumping aboard a struggling team, the Hanes family provided funding and leadership the team sorely needed, and they were rewarded when the Huskies won the 1989 national championship. Along the way, the couple did everything from selling tickets to sharpening skates to mending uniforms to raising money in the community, the norm for USHL ownership at the time. Ed served on the USHL Board of Governors and is widely-considered a truly great friend to the USHL.

2004: Ellis Moose, III The Des Moines Buccaneers used to be part of a unique ownership situation, one where the team was part of a group that included the area's youth hockey and figure skating programs, all run in a non-profit system. The person at the head of the group for many years was Ellis Moose, III. Moose was in charge of the team going back to the 1980's until the ownership changed hands in 2003. He also spent a season as the chairman of the USHL Board of Governors.

2004: Dave Tyler Perhaps no person has been more involved with the USHL on more levels over a longer period of time, or done more for the advancement of the hockey player in the United States than Dave Tyler. Tyler started out as a player with Waterloo back in its pro days before moving onto a coaching role. Eventually, he would become USHL President, a role he would hold until 1995. Tyler was an active member of USA Hockey, organizing various international teams, including the United States' entrant in the Viking Cup. He served as the chairman of the USA Hockey Junior Council until his retirement in 2007.

1998: Ted Carlson purchased the Sioux City Musketeers and owned the team during their most successful era of the mid-1980's when the Sioux City Auditorium was arguably the toughest USHL building in which to play. Carlson helped convert the Musketeers from a league doormat to a contender to a national champion, a level they reached with 1986's record-setting team. Carlson would sell the team in 2000, but not before he made his mark on the USHL and the American junior hockey landscape.

1998: Stanley E. Hubbard, II In 1983, the ownership group of the St. Paul Vulcans approached the Hubbard family looking for them to invest in the team and help save junior hockey in the Twin Cities. The Hubbards, led by Stanley, II, who at one time, played with the Vulcans, jumped in with both feet and helped bridge the USHL from the League it was in that era to the overwhelming success it is today. By changing the way the team traveled to hiring academic tutors, Hubbard's Vulcans did things that no other junior teams at the time did. Committed to the players and the community in which they played, Hubbard saw the need for junior hockey in Minnesota and did what had to not only have a team in Minnesota, but to also take it and the league to the next level, something he was able to accomplish prior to selling the team in 1999.
